Re: CMW Offers to Send Cyclone Disaster Relief Team to Queensland

Cradle Mountain Water has offered to send a team of volunteers to Queensland to assist with disaster relief as a result of the devastation caused by Cyclone Yasi.

“Cradle Mountain Water was approached by Water Services Association of Australia (WSAA) and we are more than happy to provide support in helping to restore drinking water supplies and sewerage services,” CEO Andrew Kneebone said.

“The crew of volunteers have experience in water and wastewater treatment and distribution, emergency management, disaster recovery and trade skills such as plumbing and fitting,” he said.
